The Client should check the website for accuracy, including:

- Business information
- Contact details
- Products and services
- Prices
- Images
- Links
- Business hours
- Other customer-facing information

The Client's signature or electronic acceptance of this Agreement constitutes acknowledgment and acceptance of the delivered website as the Initial Website Scope, subject to the revision period and bug warranty provided in this Agreement.

8. 14-Day Revision Period

The Client receives fourteen (14) calendar days from the date the website is delivered to request reasonable revisions and changes to the Initial Website Scope.

The revision period covers reasonable changes to the website as delivered, provided that the requested changes remain within the existing scope and functionality of the delivered website.

Examples include:

- Text corrections
- Photo replacements
- Minor content changes
- Corrections to business information
- Adjustments to existing sections
- Minor design adjustments
- Minor layout adjustments

The Client should submit revision requests within the fourteen (14) calendar day period.

Where practical, the Client should consolidate its requested revisions into a clear list.

9. Limitations of the Revision Period

The fourteen (14) day revision period does not provide unlimited free development.

The revision period is intended for reasonable changes to the delivered website within its existing scope.

The following may be considered additional services:

- New pages
- New sections
- New functionality
- New systems
- New integrations
- Booking systems
- Appointment systems
- Ordering systems
- Payment integrations
- CRM integrations
- Major redesigns
- Major restructuring
- Significant changes to the original design direction
- Substantial changes to the delivered website
- Other work requiring additional development

Such requests may be subject to PAYG pricing, a separate project quotation, a paid plan, or another agreement.

10. Expiration of the Revision Period

The fourteen (14) calendar day revision period expires automatically at the end of the applicable period.

After the revision period expires, the website will be considered finalized for purposes of the Free Website Service.

Requests submitted after the revision period may be subject to applicable PAYG rates or a separate quotation.

The expiration of the revision period does not affect the ninety (90) calendar day bug warranty.

11. 90-Day Bug Warranty

The Free Website Service includes a ninety (90) calendar day warranty for genuine bugs in the delivered website.

The warranty begins on the date the website is delivered to the Client.

During the ninety (90) calendar day warranty period, Altaventures will correct genuine technical bugs in the website delivered under this Agreement at no additional service charge.

A covered bug is a technical defect where:

- The affected functionality exists in the website delivered to the Client;
- The functionality was intended to operate as delivered;
- It does not operate substantially as intended; and
- The issue is attributable to the website implementation by Altaventures.

Where an issue qualifies as a covered bug, Altaventures will use reasonable efforts to correct it.

12. What the Bug Warranty Does Not Cover

The ninety (90) day bug warranty does not cover:

- New features
- New functionality
- New pages
- New sections
- Design changes
- Content changes
- Client-requested changes
- Changes made by the Client
- Changes made by another developer
- Unauthorized modifications
- Incorrect Client information
- Client-provided content
- Third-party service issues
- Hosting provider issues outside Altaventures' reasonable control
- Domain provider issues

- Third-party plugins or software
- External API changes
- Issues caused by misuse
- Issues caused by compromised credentials
- Issues caused by changes to third-party infrastructure
- Other circumstances outside Altaventures' reasonable control

Altaventures may nevertheless review such issues and offer a separately priced solution where appropriate.

13. Revision vs. Bug

For clarity, a revision and a bug are different.

Revision

A revision is a change the Client wants made to the website.

Example: "Please change the button text from 'Contact Us' to 'Book Now.'" This is a revision.

Bug

A bug is a technical problem where something that was supposed to work does not work.

Example: "The Contact Us button was supposed to open the contact form, but clicking it does nothing." This may be a bug.

Altaventures will reasonably determine whether a request is a revision, bug, new functionality, or additional project based on the Initial Website Scope and the nature of the requested work.

14. Warranty Does Not Mean Unlimited Maintenance

The ninety (90) day warranty does not provide unlimited free website maintenance or development.

The warranty is limited to genuine bugs in the delivered website.

It does not include:

- Content updates
- Design changes
- New functionality
- New pages
- New sections
- SEO
- GEO
- AEO
- Performance optimization
- System improvements
- New integrations
- Ongoing maintenance
- Other development work

After the warranty period expires, technical issues may be handled through an applicable PAYG service, paid Digital Growth Plan, project quotation, or separate service agreement.

15. Reporting a Bug

The Client should report suspected bugs through an approved Altaventures communication channel.

The Client should provide sufficient information for Altaventures to investigate the issue.

This may include:

- Description of the issue
- Page or feature affected
- Steps to reproduce the issue
- Screenshots
- Screen recordings
- Relevant device or browser information
- Other information reasonably required for investigation

Altaventures may request additional information before determining whether the issue qualifies under the warranty.

16. Warranty Remedy

Where Altaventures determines that an issue qualifies as a covered bug, Altaventures will use reasonable efforts to correct the affected functionality.

The warranty remedy is limited to correcting the covered website defect.

The warranty does not entitle the Client to:

- A refund
- New features
- Additional free pages
- A redesign
- New functionality
- Compensation for lost sales
- Compensation for lost revenue
- Compensation for business interruption
- Other unrelated services

17. Services After the Revision and Warranty Period

Once the fourteen (14) day revision period and ninety (90) day bug warranty have expired, the Free Website Service does not include ongoing free maintenance or development.

Future requests may be handled through:

- PAYG services
- A website project
- A paid Digital Growth Plan
- A separate service agreement
- Another mutually agreed arrangement

The expiration of these periods does not automatically terminate the Client's right to use the website

while the Free Website Service remains active.
